

Lichens of the Sawmill Slough Preserve and adjacent areas of the UNF Campus
Compiled by Justin Lemmons, Environmental Center Ecologist (2013 to present) and others as noted.

(Updated March 2015)

Arthoniaceae

Cryptothecia rubrocincta – Christmas lichen (Lemmons, 2013)

Cryptothecia striata – (Lemmons, 2013)

Chrysothricaceae

Chrysothrix candelaris – gold dust lichen (Lemmons, 2015)

Cladoniaceae

Cladina evansii – deer moss (Will Seemer, 2011)

Cladina subtenuis – Dixie reindeer lichen (Lemmons, 2013)

Cladonia leporina – jester lichen (Samuel Shannon, 2013)

Collembataceae

Leptogium azureum – blue jellyskin (Lemmons, 2013)

Graphidaceae

Graphis afzelii – powdered script lichen (Lemmons, 2013)

Graphis elegans – (Lemmons, 2015)

Gyalectaceae

Coenogonium luteum – orange dimple lichen (Lemmons and Adam Bauernfeind, 2014)

Lecanoraceae

Bacidia schweinitzii – surprise lichen (Lemmons, 2014)

Haematomma accolens – tree bloodspot (Lemmons and Adam Bauernfeind, 2014)

Parmeliaceae

Parmotrema spp. – ruffle lichens (Lemmons and Kyle Reeves, 2015)

Usnea strigosa – bushybeard lichen (Lemmons, 2014)

Pyrenulaceae

Pyrenula cruenta – bark rash lichen (Lemmons and Adam Bauernfeind, 2014)

Ramalinaceae

Ramalina stenospora – southern strap lichen (Lemmons, 2013)

References:

Brodo, I.M., S.D. Sharnoff and S. Sharnoff. 2001. Lichens of North America. Yale University Press. New Haven and London.

Lichens of North America Information (http://www.sharnoffphotos.com/lichen_info/index.html)

Consortium of North American Lichen Herbaria (<http://lichenportal.org/portal/>)